Caragh O'Brien captures in Birthmarked some of my favourite qualities of dystopian fiction: poetically beautiful prose, a strong brave lead character and most importantly a believable world. It isn't a flashy romance or an action packed epic, though there is a little bit of that, but reminds me more in style of Carrie Ryan's The Forest Of Hands And Teeth in many way, minus the zombies obviously.

Birthmarked by Caragh M. O'Brien. 9 of 10: Birthmarked just was begging for me to like it. Strong heroine, dystopian world, mystery and intrigue, and a little romance. Of course I loved it. I've read a lot of advance copies YA fiction so far this year (most of it from ALA), much of it from debut authors, much of it HIGHLY hyped.
